Console Channels Collection

NATIVE iLOK

ALMOST BEFORE HERITAGE AUDIO WAS HERITAGE AUDIO, THERE WERE TWO MODULES AND A WOODEN BOX.

Fifteen years ago, Peter Rodriguez walked into Musikmesse carrying a handmade wooden enclosure and two 80 series modules he had designed himself. Just the modules, the box, and the sound. Those two units: the 8173 and the 6673, were the foundation on which everything Heritage Audio would become was quietly being built.
Today, for the first time, both units can live inside your DAW. And yes, the wooden box is in there too, the GUI modeled exactly as it looked on those trade show tables in the early 2010s.

HA6673

The uniqueness of its design lies in adding the 66 mid band to the classic 73 architecture, a combination that creates a tonal range and flexibility that is genuinely hard to beat at any price point.

The 6673 is the console channel you reach for when you want options, when the source demands a broader palette, more mid-range sculpting possibilities, and the kind of tonal flexibility that lets you move between vintage warmth and modern clarity without switching units.

The 6673 is best for: vocals, mix bus, full arrangements, any session where you need the broadest possible range of tonal choices in a single unit.

HA8173

The genius behind the 8173 is deceptively simple: take the classic 73 EQ architecture and add the mid bands from the 81. The result is a 4-band tone monster that combines the best features of two legendary vintage modules in a way that feels completely natural.

The 8173 is the console channel you reach for when you know exactly what you want to do to a sound, and you want the most musical, intelligent tools available to do it. Our team has worked day and night to recreate the 8173 everyone loves in a way that is faithful to the hardware, yet purpose-built for the way you work today.

The 8173 is best for: mix bus, drums, guitars, bass, any source where the combination of 73 punch and 81 mid definition gives you exactly the control you need.
